MA Contemporary Arts and Education
Northumbria University

26th April - 15th June 2017

Responding to the theme of war and plague Northumbria University students and staff have put together a group exhibition for St Nicholas Cathedral.

The exhibition includes a range of diverse works and ideas that explore contamination, eradication, contemporary virus, corruption, purity, cleanliness, anxieties around health and social interaction and nonsense ailments relating to modern day politics.

Artists: Peter Corkish, Colette Davies, Rebecca Farr, Daniel Hughes, Martyn Jones, Kate Liston, Michaela Noble, William Pym, Karen Sikora, Judy Thomas, Leo Underwood.

The MA Contemporary Arts and Education course is developed in partnership with BALTIC Centre for Contemporary Art and engages students with contemporary practice and theory, whilst allowing them to develop new skills and research approaches. Designed for artists from all disciplines, including the performing arts and those working in education environments such as schools, colleges, galleries and community settings, students are supported to develop their own artistic and pedagogic practices.
